Subject: No Bank of Walmart

Too many times the public has let Walmart wield too much power. Walmart has driven most of the small to medium size retailers and manufacturers out of business. It seems rather odd for the biggest retailer to be interested in banking. The only reason I see for this is to further control competition. Walmart banks will destroy community banks and undermine local economies. When Walmart runs the banking industry, it will be difficult if not impossible for Walmart's competitors to receive financial services they need to compete with Walmart.

We should not trust Walmart to do what is right for the American people. The largest retail corporation that has a history of skirting, bending, and breaking the law for the sake of the bottom line should not be allowed to cripple the American worker by wielding financial power in addition to their commercial power.
